The Rise to Prominence: Media, Miracles, and the Global Stage

The Use of Media and Technology

TB Joshua harnessed the power of modern media to reach a global audience. His Emmanuel TV broadcast, launched in the early 2000s, became a pioneering platform that showcased live miracle healings, prayer sessions, and sermons. The strategic use of satellite television and online streaming allowed him to:

- Garner an international following
- Foster a sense of community among followers
- Attract donations and financial support

This media-centric approach contributed significantly to his rise, positioning him as a televangelist akin to figures like Benny Hinn or Kenneth Copeland, but with a distinctly African context.

Claims of Miracles and Healing

A hallmark of TB Joshua's ministry was his alleged ability to perform miracles, including:

- Healing the sick
- Exorcising demons
- Restoring sight and mobility
- Prophecy and clairvoyance

Followers often shared testimonials of miraculous recoveries, which he publicly highlighted. Critics, however, questioned the authenticity of these claims, citing the lack of medical verification and the possibility of staged or suggestive acts.

Some former members claimed that the church exploited the vulnerable, especially the poor, promising miracles in exchange for donations.

- Possible use of suggestive techniques
- The absence of independent verification

Medical experts and skeptics argued that some healings could be psychosomatic or placebo effects, calling into question the legitimacy of claimed miracles.

alleged neglect and questioned whether the church prioritized finances over safety.
