A simile is a figure of speech that compares two different things using the words "like" or "as." For example, "He runs like the wind" vividly suggests speed and freedom. Unlike metaphors, which imply identity between two entities, similes explicitly highlight similarities, making descriptions more accessible and engaging.

Why Do Writers Use Similes?

- To convey complex emotions or abstract ideas through concrete comparisons
- To develop characters and settings with specificity and nuance
- To establish tone and mood within a narrative

In Tangerine, Bloor employs similes with precision, crafting images that resonate emotionally and visually, often anchoring the reader in the novel's tense and layered atmosphere.

The Role of Similes in Characterization

In Tangerine, character development is closely tied to the effective use of similes. Bloor's descriptions often use comparisons to reveal a character's personality, emotions, or physical state.

Erik's Aggression and Intensity

Erik, the antagonist, is depicted using similes that emphasize his fiery temperament and aggressive nature. For example, Bloor describes Erik's anger as "like a volcano ready to erupt," conveying his volatile personality without explicit narration. This simile suggests:

- Unpredictability: Just as a volcano's eruption is sudden and intense, Erik's outbursts can be abrupt and destructive.
- Underlying Power: The comparison hints at Erik's latent strength and potential for destruction.

Similarly, Erik is sometimes described as "like a predator stalking prey," emphasizing his cunning and predatory instincts, which shape his interactions with others.

Paul's Innocence and Vulnerability
